

Join the Twin Bucket Brigade!

Nothing says community like a bucket brigade. Chains of neighbors passing buckets have put out fires and saved their towns. Buckets of rubble passed hand-to-hand have enabled rescuers to reach survivors of earthquakes and landslides.

Here in the Pacific Northwest, we have an earthquake in our future. Experts say water and sewer services will be interrupted for months or years. Now volunteers with the Twin Bucket Brigade are taking the Twin Bucket Emergency Toilet from neighborhood to neighborhood, meeting to meeting.

Individuals, neighborhood associations, civic groups, school teams and scout troops are invited to join the Twin Bucket Brigade. A current Brigade member can give a short orientation in person, by video conference, or even by phone. You can borrow an exhibit kit or put one together yourself.

Exhibit kits contain the following: nested pee and poo buckets, lids including a toilet seat, samples of carbon composting material, how-to leaflets in a lucite display box, a sign, a table cloth, a clipboard with a sign-up sheet, and a volunteer manual.

Interested in joining the Twin-Bucket Brigade? Contact PHLUSH at info@phlush.org. If you live in one of the twelve neighborhoods served by Neighbors West-Northwest, contact Jen at jen@nwnw.org and check out a kit from the office at 2257 NW Raleigh St, Portland.

Join the Twin Bucket Brigade!

Nothing says community like a bucket brigade. Chains of neighbors passing buckets have put out fires and saved their towns. Buckets of rubble passed hand-to-hand have enabled rescuers to reach survivors of earthquakes and landslides.

Here in the Pacific Northwest, we have an earthquake in our future. Experts say water and sewer services will be interrupted for months or years. Now volunteers with the Twin Bucket Brigade are taking the Twin Bucket Emergency Toilet from neighborhood to neighborhood, meeting to meeting.

Individuals, neighborhood associations, civic groups, school teams and scout troops are invited to join the Twin Bucket Brigade. A current Brigade member can give a short orientation in person, by video conference, or even by phone. You can borrow an exhibit kit or put one together yourself.

Exhibit kits contain the following: nested pee and poo buckets, lids including a toilet seat, samples of carbon composting material, how-to leaflets in a lucite display box, a sign, a table cloth, a clipboard with a sign-up sheet, and a volunteer manual.

Interested in joining the Twin-Bucket Brigade? Contact PHLUSH at info@phlush.org. If you live in one of the twelve neighborhoods served by Neighbors West-Northwest, contact Jen at jen@nwnw.org and check out a kit from the office at 2257 NW Raleigh St, Portland.

Join the Twin Bucket Brigade!

Nothing says community like a bucket brigade. Chains of neighbors passing buckets have put out fires and saved their towns. Buckets of rubble passed hand-to-hand have enabled rescuers to reach survivors of earthquakes and landslides.

Here in the Pacific Northwest, we have an earthquake in our future. Experts say water and sewer services will be interrupted for months or years. Now volunteers with the Twin Bucket Brigade are taking the Twin Bucket Emergency Toilet from neighborhood to neighborhood, meeting to meeting.

Individuals, neighborhood associations, civic groups, school teams and scout troops are invited to join the Twin Bucket Brigade. A current Brigade member can give a short orientation in person, by video conference, or even by phone. You can borrow an exhibit kit or put one together yourself.

Exhibit kits contain the following: nested pee and poo buckets, lids including a toilet seat, samples of carbon composting material, how-to leaflets in a lucite display box, a sign, a table cloth, a clipboard with a sign-up sheet, and a volunteer manual.

Interested in joining the Twin-Bucket Brigade? Contact PHLUSH at info@phlush.org. If you live in one of the twelve neighborhoods served by Neighbors West-Northwest, contact Jen at jen@nwnw.org and check out a kit from the office at 2257 NW Raleigh St, Portland.

